The Carmel Pine Cone

49th Year, No. 20 | THURSDAY, 16 MAY, 1963 | Copy 15c

Editor's Window

I saw something yesterday which I had nearly forgotten about. It was a milk shrine.

You do not know what a milk shrine is, do you?

If you do, you probably lived here prior to 1940, or frequently visited here before then.

They were quite common in those earlier days, the milk shrines were. Every two or three houses shared one. They stood somewhere out near the street. They consisted of everything from simple, unadorned orange crates to quite elaborate, fanciful and attractive structures of prepossessing appearance.

They served a useful purpose, a place in which the milkman from the Carmel Dairy or MacDonald's Dairy put the milk.

And did you know that we had two local dairies here until about 1947? They both used to gather their milk nearby, from the Valley and from Point Lobos. I think the Carmel Dairy eventually sent a truck as far away as Gilroy for its milk.

I began to think about these pleasant and obscure fragments of local history, and about an interesting discovery I made the other day, that one of the pine trees in the median island in Ocean Avenue west of Dolores is not a Monterey pine but some other variety. I wondered why I had never noticed these things before. I decided that I had taken so much for granted, and was neglecting the art of seeing.

And then I commenced watching the flow of people past the Editor's Window. And soon it became possible to distinguish between them: some were Carmelites, who burrowed along, their eyes preoccupied with business and private observations, wrapped in some airtight immunity to familiar things.

And some were tourists, obviously. Their pace was leisurely, their glances were curious, and they seemed happily possessed by a sensory alertness to their surroundings. They were seeing and learning things that the Carmelites around them were at the moment totally unconscious of.

I decided at once that Carmel might be better loved by its citizens, and certainly more bountifully enjoyed by them, if Carmelites became tourists in Carmel themselves.

Why should you not try taking a day off from housework, or snatching an hour from the office or store, and treating yourself to the colorful as well as the subtle pleasures of the village? And, while you are about it, scrub the dust of prejudice and convention from your eyes and subject the ordinary things you encounter to appreciation with lively interest. The tree, the fence, the gate, the street, the window, the steeple, the sky; the throngs, the traffic, the automobiles, the kids on bikes, the dogs; look at them as if you had never seen them before, and may never see them again. Indeed, this may be so.

And speaking of familiar sights, take a curious look in the mirror before you go forth.

Go, for sure, to the beach. If you are a Carmelite with convic-

Carmel's Wealthy Widow and Her Persistent Admirers

Carmel's General Plan, unlike most plans, is not apt to become a meaningless document in time, archaic and ignored. Like the wealthy but otherwise unattractive widow, it will always draw persistent admirers, because it has money to spend.

The City's 3% motel tax, which will probably produce about $75,000 a year, is restricted by law to expenditure only for objects of the Plan. Since the plan as it exists, and as it may from time to time be amended, is subject to public hearings not only before the Planning Commission but before the City Council as well, the purposes of the Plan can be presumed to fairly represent the will of the people, and not merely the prejudices or pet projects of special interests and government authorities.

A Guide to Budgeting

When the City Council commences budget sessions in July of this year, it must appropriate about $25,000 to be received dur-

PARKING LOTS
Do They Enhance the City?

By LARRY ROSE
PART I

The automobile today uses more land in the United States than people do.

Its requirements for highways, streets, parking lots, driveways, service stations, private garages, repair and storage garages and space for manufacturing and salvaging consumes the geography to a far greater extent than do people or their pursuits. It even comes ahead of agriculture.

The automobile is seldom artistic in its appetite for space.

A road or a highway, by itself, is not necessarily a thing of beauty, although the landscape through which it moves may very well be; but no one will argue that the landscape wouldn't be better off without the pavement.

Recently, much conscientious effort has gone into making the highways, streets and avenues minimally offensive to the eye of the traveler and to the environment upon which they intrude, but at best, it is an endurable compromise.

The automobile is an appliance whose use is utilitarian, and the straight line is its dogma. To give it right-of-way, to permit its efficient use, and to accommodate its capacity for rapid movement we have paid a stupendous price. Only recently, when we belatedly came to appreciate that our resources were not boundless, have we exacted some terms. Requirements for landscaping, limitation

THE MAJESTY OF LAW IS NOT RESPLENDENT

A man guilty of no crime has been accused, tried and convicted as if he had been.

Philip Chamberlin has been dismissed as director of the evening Division of Monterey Peninsula College because he had not properly prepared a brochure for the evening division; he had not held faculty meetings when requested to; other staff members had to assume some of his duties.

No crimes, these; in fact, they were charges which Chamberlin believed refutable. But the clumsy injunctions of a two-year-old law supposed to secure him, as a probationary instructor, against summary dismissal had compelled College President Fred Huber to hammer them up into a scaffold of accusations and obliged a chagrined Board of Trustees Tuesday night to spring him through the trap in execution.

If it was any satisfaction, Chamberlin had a fair trial. But the humiliation of any trial at all has robbed him of this trivial comfort and deprived justice of its majesty.

When Huber, in October of last year, notified Chamberlin of his unsatisfactory performance, a chain of events was set in course that resulted in seven formal charges being lodged, a two-night ten-hour hearing being held, with the Board represented by County Counsel William Stoffers and Chamberlin represented by Carmel attorneys Francis Heisler and Charles Stewart, and a string of professional witnesses called to

DIM PROSPECTS FOR THE PRESBYTERIANS

If the Presbyterian Church is to get an extension of their use permit so that they may build a Sunday school, and later on get a permit for a 12,000 square foot parking lot south of the present chapel, nothing in the proceedings of the Planning Commission yesterday would indicate that it may issue from that body.

Land Use Committee members Florence Josselyn and Hugh Smith brought in tentative findings on an application heard in a recent public hearing, and the tenor of the findings, as well as the response of other Commission members, spoke quite distinctly the dismay

How fragrant fair is Spring in May, when sunshine beckons holiday, except when come the chilling fogs, or when it's raining cats and dogs.

Now linnets, wrens and chickadees are nesting in the valley trees, while skylarks burst from azure blue, and I am nursing Asia flu.

How lovely now to roam the range if you can stand the weather's change. Through wind or snow from east or west, my good electric blanket's best.

So hail some more, and hail to Spring, and also what may summer bring. Go, chase the open road with song—I'll stay indoors where I belong.

BUSINESS

Bum Deal Recoveries

A bill to create a real estate recovery fund for payment of judgments arising out of real estate law violations involving real estate brokers and salesmen has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Hugh M. Burns, President Pro-tem of the Senate.

Senate Bill No. 1516, initiated and sponsored by the California Real Estate Association with the support of the Real Estate Commissioner, according to Senator Burns, would protect the complainants in such violations. Violations for damages against brokers and salesmen would be paid from the recovery fund up to a $10,000 maximum.

Said Burns: "The Bill will authorize the State Real Estate Commissioner to establish and maintain the recovery fund from license fees. Plaintiffs winning judgments against brokers or salesmen unable to pay the claim from their own assets, would be paid from the recovery fund. This payment would be available upon order of the Superior Court."

The recovery fund would be financed solely from license fees from California's 140,000 real estate brokers and salesmen. These same fees maintain the State Division of Real Estate.

If offending real estate brokers or salesmen are unable to pay damages assessed by the court, they may have their license suspended. Also, they may be denied a new license until the damages advanced from this recovery fund are repaid, plus interest at four per cent a year.

At a press conference preceding introduction of the bill, the president of the 40,000-member California Real Estate Association, L. H. Wilson of Fresno, said the new law will guarantee the public maximum safety in our real estate dealings in California.

Wilson further stated: Presently, the buyer or seller whose transaction may have been mishandled by an irresponsible licensee has had little recourse in recovering any losses. If the broker or salesman involved lacked assets to satisfy judgments, the buyer or seller suffered his loss without hope of recovery. The new recovery fund will cure this inequity and provide the public with proper protection.

POLITICS

Bill Mill

The legislative mill has ground out a stupendous number of bills in the two houses of the State legislature. The Assembly wound up with 3,129 bills and something like 400 resolutions to digest; the Senate, 1,624 of its own bills and a couple of hundred other pieces of legislation. Eacl bill, upon successful passage in its house of initiation will have to move over to the other chamber, and so the interchange of bills approaches a promise of indigestibility.

A.B. 2571 (Beilenso, D-Beverly Hills) would prohibit cities and counties from contracting with private organizations (Chamber of Commerce, MCID) to advertise the city or county, and would prohibit the use of public funds for such purposes. It would hit the thousands of dollars that the Board of Supervisors now dispense in Monterey for this purpose — incidentally, depriving the individual supervisors of some of their feudal powers.

SB 1467 (Farr, D-Carmel) is the cornerstone of a series of bills by means of which Carmel's Senator Fred S. Farr hopes to originate a California scenic highway system representing a challenge to the nation, thus duplicating once again California's lead in open space legislation, much of which was first introduced by Farr in 1959. Farr's program envisions creation of a master plan, the establishment of scenic overlooks, extension of the scenic easement law and powers enabling counties to duplicate the state program.

A.B. 2509 (Holmes, R-Santa Barbara) would prohibit a physician and surgeon from having any membership, proprietary or co-ownership interest in any form in a pharmacy. The bill's author, and the California Pharmaceutical Association, are apprehensive of abuses inherent in a combination which both prescribes and dispenses prescriptions.

Increased State support of education is philosophically undebatable, but the method of extending it is in constant contention. A.B. 888, supported by educational specialists, including the State Board of Education as well as the State Superintendent of Education, Dr. Max Rafferty, provides for $101 million of state support, whereas A.B. 1000, the Brown administration-sponsored bill, provides only for an additional $30 million. Both bills include a county-wide equalization tax which would produce an added $25 million. Either bill, if enacted, will profoundly disturb the tax balance for the Carmel Unified School District, a so-called "rich" district which, as under so many other other equalization programs, will suffer that others less fortunate may prosper.

S.B. 65 (Farr, D-Carmel) is controversial in itself, but not extensively so. It seeks to stop the insenate slaughter of the mountain lion, which now is apparently threatened with extinction by reason of the bounty on its pelt. The State paid $5,230 for 114 slain lions in 1962, and the Department of Fish and Game estimates that there are only 500 to 600 lions remaining in the State. Farr's bill proposes to remove the bounty, and the incentive, before the lion becomes a museum curiosity. Only four western states now pay bounties, and Montana and Idaho have recently removed theirs. Ansel Adams, Laurance Rockefeller, Nicholas Roosevelt, Lawrence Halprin, Newton Drury and Margaret Wentworth Owings are among the members of a committeee supporting the bill, which finds angry opposition from some ranchers and cattlemen.

tions, you have not been there for months.

Visit the library, and take a moment to glance at a magazine in front of the fireplace, or sit on the porch with a quiet book.

Go in to one of the art galleries. Devote a few placid moments to determining if what is said about painting and sculpting is really so. You will perhaps come away with an opinion which, for the first time, is really yours.

Wander through Devendorf Park. Find the drinking fountain on the way, the sequestered benches (rarely used, but a service club wants to put more there), the war memorial, the charming little bust of Frank Devendorf by Laura Maxwell, and the gloomy surprise of the towering, gaunt and brooding statue of an expressionless Serra, dappled with sunlight and melancholy thought.

Go up to Forest Hill Park, where soon there will be a putting green and croquet greens, and watch the earnest gentlemen engage with exquisite seriousness in a formidable contest of shuffleboard, murmuring and exclaiming and enjoying the harmless excitement of delicate combat.

And there is tennis nearby, too; the snick and slap of the white ball crisply struck across the net; limbs and arms, in stance and attitude as graceful as Grecian imagination, uncoiling to lash back, not in some wilful anger, but in clean and vigorous expression of a symbolism regrettably remote to a world fiercely intent on saying what is meant.

Treat yourself to ambling in and out of gift shops, which thrive on idle curiosity. And explore the courts of the Golden Bough, the Pine Inn, Su Vecino, the Craft Center, Der Ling (that tiny and precious alley between gloves and gadgets), and the others which are increasingly becoming characteristic of the happy casualness of Carmel shopping. For tourists.

Treat yourself to a luncheon, or a cup of coffee, or tea and biscuits downtown. Or a soda, or ice cream. Or a ripe, red and wonderful apple from the market.

Stop in at a stock broker's. Look importantly at the listing board, narrowly and confidentially scan the news coming off the wire service. Consider carefully the knots of intent men discussing the mysterious gyrations and undulations of commerce and enterprise. Mentally buy 5,000 shares of AT&T, with that inexhaustible roll of one-thousand-dollar bills you always carry in your pocket, then stalk out the door under the curious gaze of the envious and bemused.

And shop some place else. Just for once, get daring enough to buy your accustomed things some place else. Or buy something else in your accustomed place.

Take a taxi home, with a bag full of nothing. Or ride the bus around the point to nowhere, and come back as if you had never been there before.

Run home if you walk; ride home if you run. Go in the back door instead of the front. Climb through a window if you have always used both doors. And before you pull the curtains to close out the evening, look for a long, long time at the blue and pink in the sky and where the dark, ragged crown of the pines thrust their exclamations into it.

And if you have surreptitiously stolen forth from your store or your business, go next door or across the street, or to the other end of town — that other end which always has seemed to be the undesirable side of the tracks that men make in their dreary march to success — and pass a pleasant word or two with your competition. If you think that you have none, then make peace with yourself.

After such a day spent in such a way you will no longer be distinguishable from the tourist. For you will have enjoyed Carmel also.

But you will have one advantage that neither you nor the departing tourist has had: you will also be able to enjoy Carmel tomorrow.

a new concept of Armed Forces Day, with a special exhibit of Civil Defense functions.

Amateur radio operators on the West Coast will have a chance to participate in this year's Armed Forces Day Communications Test on Saturday, 18 May, the Twelfth Naval District announced today.

The regular program has been expanded this year to include a Navy West Coast station in addition to regular military radio stations in Washington, D.C. In the past, Armed Forces Day amateur-military tests were beamed only from that city.

The new procedure will now allow amateurs with low-powered equipment located on the West Coast to participate.

The Naval Communications Station, San Francisco, headquarters of which is located in Stockton, will handle the Navy's West Coast portion of the tests.

Manzanita Club

Roast prime ribs of beef, prepared by Mrs. Kerman Alderson, will be on the menu of the Manzanita Club's second annual dinner Monday night at the Carmel Legion Hall, sponsored by Carmel American Legion Post 512.

Chef (chefess?) Marie Alderson, wife of the vice commander, has been cooking at Legion Hall since 1938, and delayed a vacation trip in order not to disappoint Monday's dinner guests. The time will be 7:30 p.m. and those wishing reservations should telephone James Kelsey, MA 4-6630. The public is invited.

Co-chairmen of the event are past commanders Paul T. Artellan and James Kelsey, aided by committeemen Fabrian Era, Dick Zimmerman, Al Chapin, James Cherry, Joe Beneventi, Kerman Alderson and Roland Pilon.

Manzanita Club members who will be honored are Ben Wetzel, president; Paul Mercurio, Robert Leidig, Fred Leidig, "Doc" Don Staniford, Carl S. Rohr, Gabe Burnett, all of Carmel; Irwin Henry and Frank Murphy of Carmel Valley; former Carmelites William Frolli of King City and Earl Graft of Arizona.

Salvation Army

To finance its work in the Carmel area, as well as the statewide and regional aid offered residents here, the Salvation Army is conducting an independent operating fund drive this year, which will include both a mail campaign and a special gifts phase, beginning on Monday.

Stanley E. Ewig, assistant vice-president and manager of the Carmel branch of the Security National Bank of Monterey County, is chairman of the drive, planned to coincide with National Salvation Army Week.

Goal for the Carmel area, including Carmel, Big Sur, Carmel Valley, and Pebble Beach, is $5,068.

Volunteers on the local service unit committee are Fire Chief Robert E. Smith, chairman; Mrs. Mary L. Clayton, welfare secretary; Jim Bannerman, treasurer; Mrs. Rose D. Smith, recording secretary; Clyde Klaumann, chief of police; Mrs. Earl Dewar, Miss Katharine F. Branson, William J. Rissel, Mrs. Alice Askew, Col. William M. Chapman, Eugene W. Nissen, and Clara Winslow.

Chief Smith reports that last year, through the volunteer service of Mrs. Clayton's social welfare committee, over 102 individuals received emergency aid assistance. Immediate relief was provided for families in distress, those with extended unemployment and chronic illness. Emergency shelter was provided for women and children. Other services included alcoholic rehabilitation care, aid to unmarried mothers, and correctional services for prisoners and their families. Underpriviledged children were sent to the summer camp owned and operated by the Salvation Army in the Santa Cruz mountains. Optical and medical aid was provided for the aged and others unable to afford it.

Obedience workouts for dogs under show conditions are being provided by the Del Monte Kennel Club in preparation for their 38th Annual All Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trials, to be held at Del Monte Lodge on 26 May.

The free handling classes, which will conclude this Sunday, are held at Carmel High School, commencing at 1:30 p.m., and consist of practicing show routine and handling instruction. During the latter, owners learn, free of charge, how to groom and handle their own dogs. Separate classes for children are also being held.

Landscaping Completed

A LANDSCAPING PROJECT to make more attractive the primary entrance to Carmel at the junction of Carpenter Street extension and Highway One is being completed this week. It was designed and supervised by assistant County planner Richard Murray, a licensed landscape achitect, on loan from the Planning Department to the County Road Department.

THE LANDSCAPING WILL NOT CONCEAL the metallic mish-mash of the traffic regulation appurtenances, but from certain approaches it will make a much more attractive impression, and represents a major effort to soften the harsh effect of the area.

THE ROAD DEPARTMENT CREW completes planting of Japanese cedar and dawn redwoods. Also planted were Monterey, Bishop and Aleppo pines, bald cypress, liquid amber, scarlet oak, Hooker manzanita, vine maple, rock rose, cotoneaster, Oregon grape, and toyon. As ground cover, the County installed periwinkle, mattress vine and native coastal dry land grasses. Murray has noted that it will be about one year before the real effect of the project will commence to unfold, after the plants are established. (All photos on this page by The Pine Cone) ing this fiscal year and the expected $75,000 anticipated for the full year of 1963-64.

To guide its deliberations (and also to give it a bulwark against the assorted pressures already beginning to bubble in the private plottings of certain business, cultural and civic groups) the Council asked the Planning Commission to examine the Plan and provide the senior body with recommendations. Last week, Chairman Fred Keeble submitted the Commission's recommendations, filled with as many inconsistencies as with surprises.

No Surprise, Sunset

It was no surprise that the matter of first priority was the acquisition of Sunset School site. The Commission, quite properly, did not distress itself with the inadequacy of the funds at present.

The Sunset price tag could be in excess of $500,000, and the motel tax might require more than four years to produce such an amount, even if nothing else were acquired in the manwhile.

But Others Are

But the Planning Commission recommendations, which were inspired by a belief that lands should be sought which "show the best likelihood of providing the most immediate and long term benefit to the majority of Carmel's citizens and visitors" also offered several other enormously attractive proposals: the vacant property on the west side of Carpenter, between Ocean and Sixth, as a natural park; additional parts of Flanders Canyon, to supplement a sixty-foot-wide strip now owned by the city along the eastern city limits; the southwest corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue as a combination park and parking lot; the wedge-shaped block on the southeast corner of Ocean and Junipero avenues, known as "Forest Lodge," also as a park; and the western portion of the Elizabeth McClung White property adjoining the sand dunes north of Ocean Avenue, as a further extension of the publicly-owned dunes.

Controversial Amendments

The Commission evidently took lightly the Council's instructions to concern themselves with the proposals of the General Plan; only one proposal is presently on the General Plan.

This, of course, could be rectified by the process of amending the Plan, but that could consume considerable time and much labor, and would certainly generate some dispute, particularly where questions of off-street parking could be involved.

The Motel interests, who are responsible for collecting the tax, believe that none of it should be spent on off-street parking, which they already provide on their own business sites. But the Business Association and the Carmel Board of Realtors take a contrary view. And the question of whether or nor the City should in any way engage in providing off-street parking is a sticky corollary that has yet to be independently resolved.

The Council's Alternative

But unless the Plan is amended in line with the proposals, or the Council chooses to ignore them altogether and pick out its own set of ideas — which could be merely improvement of presently-owned lands, without any further land acquisition at all — they may not have anything else to budget for besides Sunset School. For there is a strong probability that budgeting for items other than those

Parking Lots — Do They Enhance The City?

and removal of billboards, sensitive location of routes and less literal design of overpasses and exchanges are perhaps assurances against further excesses, but they are not penance for the past.

While such begrudging concessions have done something for the spaces in which automobiles move, deplorably little has been done about the places in which automobiles are parked. Yet, they are at rest more often than they are moving: they are at rest at a point of departure, and they come to rest at the point of arrival. In a city or town, while engaged in the daily commerce of the people who use them, they move about in anything but stately progression to a series of rests, parking at curbs, in unattractive congestion on naked parking lots, in queues in service stations, stacked up in barn-like storage garages, returning home at last to the family driveway, where they are tethered, block after block, in mechanical pastures.

It took public opinion a long, long time to do something about the unsightliness of the highway and the street, the places where automobiles move. It will require at least as much time to do something about the unsightliness of the places where cars park, and the task will not be as easy, for there is something more than inertia to be overcome. Whereas the highway and street is in the public domain, and the agencies controlling them are public, much of the land for parking is privately owned. And the right of a man to do what he wishes with his own land, though it is increasingly mythical in fact, is yet a redoubtable theory.

Where efforts at individual persuasion have failed — and they have not been notoriously successful — the community has turned to law. The tool it has employed is the broad, ever-extending blanket called the police power, of which zoning is the passive exponent.

In a town such as Carmel whose appearance is so rigidly controlled and directed by such laws; where the use of land is precisely regulated; where landscaping, signs, building design, lighting, open spaces and density of occupation are categorically managed in almost every respect, the use of land for off-street parking has been subject to astonishingly little or no control. The reasons are probably two-fold: first, because parking has been looked upon as an adjunct of some other primary use; and secondly, because there didn't seem to be much that could be done about its appearance.

But when Carmel recently enacted laws governing parking lots in residential districts, so that they would be as inoffensive as possible to the residential environment, it was discovered that something could be done about the problem. Officials, looking about at the same use in the business district, saw its baleful effect there, and reasoned that the need was equally as great, and the principles of controls equally as valid.

What resulted was a proposed ordinance entitled: AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING REGULATIONS FOR PARKING LOTS IN ALL COMMERCIAL DISTRICTS, which states in its preamble, "It is determined that off-street parking lots are of vital value and necessity to the commercial community, but by their very nature they present special problems in appearance. Large areas of surfacing occupied by assorted vehicles are not in character with nor an enhancement to the city; and parking lots should present as attractive an appearance to the user and the general public as is required of any developments in the commercial district."

Upon this ordinance, proposed by the Planning Commission, the City Council will commence public hearings on 22 May. Its eventual enactment could do much to keep intact the pleasing appearance of Carmel.

INTERNAL LANDSCAPING, as may be seen in the Purity parking lot at Mission and Sixth avenues, in addition to perimeter fencing and landscaping, breaks up one of the most troublesome characteristics of parking lots: the unbroken expanse of level surfacing necessary to the maneuvering and placement of automobiles.

WITHOUT INTERIOR RELIEF, a parking lot, such as the huge installation behind the Carmel Plaza, becomes bleak and monotonous, and barrenly accentuates the inherently unattractive function of the lot.

UPI Chief Cites Changes In Soviet Union Since Death of Stalin

For many years, perhaps in an aura of wishful thinking, Americans have deluded themselves into the belief that the Soviet Union is a giant with feet of clay, that the "unstable" Soviet regime, existing from one crisis to another, is on the verge of collapse.

So remarks Mr. Henry Shapiro, Chief of the Moscow bureau of United Press International, who is presently on leave to conduct a graduate seminar in journalism on the University of California's Berkeley campus.

"The Soviet Union, has, indeed, in the 45 years of its existence, suffered many crises—political, economic, cultural," says Shapiro. "Yet, today, it is in a position boldly to challenge western civilization on a multitude of fronts.

"It now appears clear that we shall continue to live in the years ahead in a climate of chronic crisis; and it's all the more essential, I submit, for Americans to be fully aware of the Soviet facts of life because, in addition to many other reasons, no battle or even a skirmish can be won without full knowledge of the adversary's potential. Mr. Khrushchev, I believe, is a much more skillful and formidable adversary than Stalin ever was."

As a correspondent in Moscow for nearly thirty years, Henry Shapiro has covered almost every major event in the USSR, including the treason trials of the thirties, World War II, Stalin's death and most of the post-Stalin period. In 1957 he interviewed Chairman Khrushchev on a wide range of important topics. In 1960 he covered the Khrushchev trip to the United States. Later in the year he again returned to the United States where he received the Distinguished Achievement Award for Journalism from UCLA.

Perhaps the most significant development in the Soviet Union since Stalin's death, says Mr. Shapiro, has been the steady abolition of the reign of terror, the drastic reduction of the power of the secret police climaxed by the execution of Police Chief Beria, the disappearance of the dread "midnight knock at the door," which had previously claimed so many victims. The jails and labor camps were emptied of political prisoners. The concept of law, recognition of the principle of legality as opposed to arbitrary police action, was introduced.

"But let there be no misunderstanding," continues the UPI bureau chief. "The Soviet Union today is still ages apart from a Western type of liberal democracy. It remains a largely monolithic, authoritarian society in which some of the basic freedoms of the Western world are still absent. Liberal reforms, minor or far reaching, are still usually initiated at the top. However, as the base of power is broadening and more discussion at the bottom is tolerated, even encouraged, there is evidence that increasing attention is paid to popular pressures."

Mr. Shapiro points out that Stalinism as a political philosophy, as a technique of government in the Soviet Union, may be dead. But, he says, there still are thousands of "Little Stalins" cluttering up the vast state, party and economic machines, men fashioned ond conditioned by long years of Stalinist rule.

"I recall a popular anecdote, which made the Moscow rounds when Stalin suffered his final degradation and was removed from Lenin's Mausoleum to be buried against the Kremlin Wall beside the grave of Mikhail Kalinin, the second president of the Soviet Union. Welcoming his neighbor, Kalinin asked, 'How long will you be with us, Comrade Stalin?' 'At least until the next Party Congress,' Stalin replied. 'And where will you go then?' Kalinin asked, to which Stalin promptly replied, 'I shall go wherever the Party sends me.'"

To indicate Soviet popular awareness of the meaning of nuclear war and the fatalism of the more sophisticated citizens, Mr. Shapiro offers another anecdote:

CARMEL VALLEY
MEMOIRS OF JOE HITCHCOCK
By Marion Crush

In the last installment I was telling you about the Costanoan Indians and the Mission. The Indians depended on fishing and hunting for their means of subsistence. Maize (Indian corn) was the original object of agriculture. Acorns and wild cherries, which abounded in these parts, were gathered during the summer months until late fall.

They also made meal of the buckeye balls, but as they were very bitter they had to be washed many times until the bitterness was eliminated. The same was true of the acorns.

The Frenchman, LaPerouse, gave the Missionaries many useful articles for the Indians. He gave them beads, coverlids, and a variety of iron tools. The gardener belonging to his expedition gave them potatoes brought from Chile and seeds of grains from France. The Missionaries had brought the olive, grape, and pear, as well as the Castillian rose and many other flowering seeds that still abound in our beautiful state. LaPerouse was a true benefactor of the Indians.

The Indians worked very hard at the Missions because most of them preferred the protective wings of the Mission Fathers to the hard life in the hills. Here they learned the crafts of agriculture and how to dry and store food, where before they had relied on what they could hunt and fish to supplement their daily diet of acorns. Here also, the Indians were taught how to tend cattle and sheep and they learned to be good horsemen. They were taught silversmithing and iron work because bits and spurs were in demand for the horsemen who had to ride herd on the cattle belonging to the missions.

Some, however, preferred the freedom of the hills to the discipline of a Mission. One favorite past-time for the Indians, in and out of the Mission, was spear fishing. When I was a young boy, we too used to gather at the Carmel River when it started to flow, to spear the steelhead trout as they came up river to spawn. The early Indians were fishing in this manner long before the Mission Fathers came here. They used torches made by gathering pitch from the pine trees. Later on, coal oil lanterns were used by inserting a tin with a glass reflector on one side and leaving the other side open. The lanterns would throw a beam of light a far distance. Indian boys fished barefoot. In fact, the Indians fished naked, as they wore no clothes when they could escape the eye of the Padres. At the mission the men were taught to wear pants and the women skirts and blouses.

Our sister mission, San Antonio de Padua, was founded by Fr. Serra on 14 June, 1771. It is located in a beautiful meadow in the Santa Lucia Mountains which is now known as Hunter Liggett, an Army establishment and part of the Los Padres National Forest. In a book by Frances Rand Smith entitled, "The Mission of San Antonio De Padua," she points out that the construction of ditches and flumes that supplied the Mission with water for irrigation were examined in 1914 by the County Surveyor of Monterey. He checked the grade established by them around rocky cliffs and across gulches and said that they could not be improved upon even with modern surveying instruments. These water courses were all built by Indians.

Some years ago, I was privileged to see a book of music containing the Gregorian chant used by the Indian choir of San Antonio. It had a rawhide binding, a staff with only four lines, and notes which were square instead of oval. The book was presented to Mrs. Jane L. Stanford in 1883 by Fr. Angelo Casanova and is in the

Days Before Yesterday

7 May, 1923

Pardow Hooper was down from San Francisco last weekend. He got into the baseball game last Sunday.

A new source of income for the city is the license tax paid by the Shell Oil Co., whose truck tanks are now delivering in this city.

"Cabbages and Kings" has lost one of its valued employees. Miss Lillian Andrews, for some months in the weaving department, has gone to Los Angeles.

John B. Jordan had old friends as guests at Pine Inn last weekend, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Phillips of Oakland.

Slowly and surely the new Hicks home on Junipero Street is nearing completion. It will be midsummer, however, before this attractive nine-room residence is ready for occupancy.

A correspondent of the Pine Cone writes to call attention to the gradual decay and disappearance of oaks and pines on the Forest Theatre grounds. She suggests some method of saving the oaks. New pines should also be planted.

The Carmel store of the Palace Drug Co. is now in new quarters in the Carmel Development Co. building. Everything is bright and new, and Tom Bickle has arranged the various departments for quick and convenient service. A feature is the music room.

The Schweninger-Wilson-Van Riper party will be away at least four months. In addition to their stay at Papeete, Tahiti, where they will visit artist William Ritschel, thirty miles out at Morea, they will go to Wellington, New Zealand; Sydney, Australia; Fiji, Raratonga, the Solomons and Hawaii.

MEAT DELIVERY

The Oak Grove Meat Market will run a well-stocked wagon to Carmel every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Orders may be phoned. Prompt delivery.

Myron K. Oliver, young artist, son of J. K. Oliver of Monterey, is back on the Peninsula after an absence of four years.

Carmel Boys Club gave a real party last Wednesday, with real ice cream, to the mothers and a couple of fathers. Glenn and Martin Leidig and Tom Warren were on the receiving party, and Teddy and Dale Leidig were the ushers.

The Dummage Plumbing shop on the rear of a Dolores Street lot near Ocean Avenue, has been moved to the sidewalk line and is being made into stores. This block will eventually be all business places.

Monterey Mayor Benjamin F. Wright has assumed his duties as mayor even though his right to occupy the position is questioned by a group of electors who have begun an ouster action in the superior court. An action has also been filed against Councilman William H. Faringhy's eligibility.

Mrs. C. H. Yates and Miss Louise Conger have returned from their dog judging in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Seideneck are the week's guests of Mrs. Charles Howland at Idlewild, down the coast.

Letters to The Editor

Forest Planning

Sir:

Thank you very much for sending us the copies of your very interesting issue which contains the story on the "Two Story Forest" (Pine Cone, 20 Dec., 1962).

We found this story to contain some very interesting thoughts, which will be of great interest to our design people, and we propose to make use of the copies you have sent by circulating them to important offices in our Planning and Development Section where they can receive attention from the interested people.

We share with you your concern over the possible loss of the "Two Story Forest" and over the important relationship between environment and design which is discussed so effectively in the story in question.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES P. TRYNER, Supervisor of Planning and Development,
Division of Beaches and Parks

EXPENSIVELY BAD MANNERS

Dear Sir:

Today I had my faith in humans shaken, but good!

At 12:30 p.m. I parked in the post office parking lot and dashed into the post office for my mail and some stamps. I was back to my car in five minutes.

In the few minutes I was gone, the car parked just to the left of mine had driven away, after its bumper had done $40 worth of damage to my left rear fender. No note of identification, no note of regret, no note — period — was left.

If that's how a decent Carmel citizen conducts himself, then I shall take Ivan Ivanovich instead!

Joe Rossen
Carmel

(Editor's Comment: Mr. Rossen, that is not the way decent Carmelites conduct themselves.

Your outrage communicates itself to each and every motorist who has either experienced such an accident or, more shockingly, has witnessed such a thing occurring. It's like watching a thug committing a holdup in broad daylight, isn't it?

If you see such a thing as occurred to Mr. Rossen, don't sit there, do something. Take down the license number and report it both to the victim and to the police.)

BE KIND

Dear Sir:

Your window needs a good cleaning.

Take a better look at the world's cruelty and give your readers the real truth instead of a humorless sarcasm on a mixture of Mother's Day and "Be Kind to Animals Week," and rather stupid stories about hippos.

So, in your opinion, people are kind to animals and: "It has led to disaster?"

What leads to disaster is people like you who want to be blind for one reason or another.

Learn kindness yourself before you write about it.

M. M. Thery

(Editor's Comment: If you were a hippopotamus, you would not think that story stupid. As a matter of fact, if you were the colonial secretary who paid for the error with his career, you would not have thought it stupid, either.

And may I correct one further misapprehension on your part: I do not think that the kindness which people have extended to animals has been disastrous. Rather, it is the failure to be kind as well to people which has led to the disaster.

(I salute your earnestness, but cannot help at the same time recalling Santayana's definition of a zealot.)

From A Librarian's Notebook

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

John Gunther has a small book published recently which he has called A Fragment of Autobiography, the Fun of Writing the Inside Books. The title is self-explanatory and almost as long as the book, which is done in the author's usual easy, readable style. The writing of the books was not that easy, as the two photographs at the front of the book will testify.

It is quite possible that buying the next book was a mistake, but I hope not. It is called Outdoor Gardening in Pots and Boxes. The thing is that most of this pot gardening was done on the east coast and this is the west coast, and never the twain shall meet. But surely the soil mixtures and advice about pots and such, will be valuable here. The illustrations seem to be mostly annuals but the pots and the arrangements are beautiful. Oh yes, it was written by George Taloumis, who is a garden columnist for the big New York newspapers.

It seems that there was once a small section of Canada which ran the full cycle from fur traders to dust bowl in less than 50 years, and it was there that the parents of Wallace Stegner homesteaded in 1914. His memories of those years up to 1920 are vivid, and his book about them is called Wolf Willow. This is a book full of rich stories and living histories.

The exceptional child is often the neglected child. A new book by Paul Torrence may be a help in overcoming this neglect. It is entitled Guiding Creative Talent. The book shows how to recognize and guide creative talent in children and young people.

Most of us are interested in outlaws of the old west, and James Horan has a book just out which is entitled Desperate Men, and is an enlarged and revised edition of an earlier book. Illustrated with a multitude of photographs, this should be fascinating reading to anyone who likes a western in truth or fiction.

You Ought to Patent That is the title of a book by Stacy Jones, who is a columnist for the New York Times. He tells all about patents and how to get them, and all the steps necessary in the getting. There is an index so that if the reader wishes to check up on some particular phase of the process, he

The Lively Arts

SCULPTING
Enters Paris Show

A group of sculptors who started experimenting with new casting techniques in a tiny Berkeley foundry three years ago will represent the United States this fall at a major international art show in Paris.

The exhibition will be the third Biennale de Paris, to be held 28 Sept. to 4 Nov. at the city's museum of Modern Art. Taking works from outstanding young artists from around the world, it now ranks in importance with the older festivals of Venice and Sao Paulo.

The foundry was started when several artists at the University wanted to cast their own bronzes. Usually sculptors have sent their wax models to professional foundrymen to be cast. However, American foundries are extremely expensive and lack experience with art work. This left the Berkeley sculptors the choice of either sending their work abroad or doing it themselves.

This group was led by Peter Voulkos, associate professor of design, and Donald Haskin, instructor in design, both of the decorative art department at the Berkeley campus, and Harold Paris, assistant professor of art. Julius Schmidt, now at Cranbrook Academy in Michigan, was also one of the founders.

The artists achieved what they originally wanted — fast and high quality castings at a fraction of the previous cost. But more important, they discovered a whole new world in the art of sculpture.

The conventional bronze sculpture method starts with a carved wax model which is embedded in plaster, then melted out with heat. The plastic mold is then used to cast the bronze. The Berkeley artists found they didn't need to be restricted to a wax original, but could start out with cloth, cardboard, plastic, rope and even old wooden furniture. Other metals, like aluminum and cast iron, were tried.

An age limit of 35 will exclude the founders of the Berkeley sculptor's movement. Contributors already selected, who are either instructors, graduate students or former instructors at the Berkeley campus, are Charles Ross, Stephen de Staebler, David Lynn, Erik Gronborg, Victor Royer, Arlo Acton, Frederich Sauls, Jerome Johnson, Bruce Beasley and Gary Melchert.

Shipment of the art to and from Paris will be financed through the generosity of private donors.

THEATRE
Workshop Director

Edward M. Spencer, Dean of Summer Sessions at Fresno State College, has announced the appointment of Lawrence H. Wismer of San Francisco as director of the Theatre Workshop to be held this summer at the Golden Bough Circle Theatre. Fresno State's Division of Speech Arts conducts the workshop, which had its first successful season a year ago, in cooperation with the Circle Theatre and the Monterey Peninsula Community Theatre.

Scheduled to run from 17 June to 3 September, the summer school will include participation in one major production and a number of student-produced plays, as well as classwork in many phases of theatre. Wismer, who has taught at major colleges and universities on both east and west coasts, will be assisted by Frederick Rider and Nick Zanides, of the Circle Theatre staff, in offering a rounded educational program.

Wismer has 15 years of summer stock experience to his credit, on the straw-hat circuit in Maine and Massachusetts. At present he is directing the Interplayers, one of San Francisco's best known theatre groups, and will receive a Ph.D. from Stanford in June. He will replace Alvin Kaufman, founder of the workshop, who is also a doctoral candidate at Stanford and must remain on campus this summer.

Enrollment in the theatre workship is still open. Information may be obtained by writing to Wismer in care of the Circle Theatre, P.O. Box AL, Carmel.

"Antigone"

Mary Gannon, John Elber and Lynnea Larson are Monterey Peninsula College students from the Carmel area who have parts in the MPC Players' production of "Antigone," which will open Monday evening and run nightly through Saturday, 25 May, in the MPC Little Theatre.

Miss Gannon, newly-selected "Miss Monterey County," will be Antigone in the Sophocles tragedy in a modern version by French playwright Jean Anouilh. John Elber will be seen as Creon, and Miss Larson, Eurydice.

Director of the play is MPC drama department chairman Morgan Stock. Curtain time each evening will be at 8:30; tickets may be purchased at the door.

MUSIC
Thomas Paul Concert

Bass-baritone Thomas Paul will come from New York and San Francisco, where he has been playing leading operatic roles, to sing at Monterey Peninsula College tomorrow.

Presented by the MPC Music Department's Artist Concert Series, he will begin his recital at 8:30 p.m. in the music hall on campus. The public is invited to attend without charge.

Most recently a principal with the San Francisco Opera Company (spring season), the young artist was a guest singer at the Carmel Bach Festival in 1956, 1958, 1961 and 1962.

Born in Chicago, Thomas Paul grew up in California and graduated from Occidental College in 1956. After graduate studies in conducting at the Juilliard School in New York, he entered the service and was assigned to sing with the U.S. Army Chorus in Washington, D.C., appearing before visiting foreign dignitaries and in special music programs at the White House.

His three years of choral singing revealed a promising bass-baritone voice and led him to forsake conducting ambitions for a singing career.

Accompanying Paul at tomorrow's concert will be the well-known pianist, Ralph Linsley, also of Carmel Bach Festival fame.

New Bach Soloists

Among the soloists new to the Carmel Bach Festival this year, Robert Oliver, bass, from Princeton, New Jersey, will sing the role of Jesus in The Passion According to St. John, and the title role in Handel's Hercules. He has appeared with the American Opera Society in New York and the San Francisco Symphony, and has recorded for Columbia Records.

Mary MacKenzie, contralto, from La Jolla, will sing in The Passion According to St. John, presented each Sunday, and in the J. S. Bach Cantata No. 53. In 1960, this young artist won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions Award, a splendid recognition of her musical background and extensive opera and concert experience.

Carole Bogard, soprano, from Berkeley, has received wide acclaim by discerning audiences and critics in the San Francisco Bay area and other parts of California. She will be heard in Cantata No. 51 by J. S. Bach, and in the Oratorio, "Judicium Salomonis," by Carissimi.

The Carmel Bach Festival, scheduled for 19-28 July, again will be under the skilled baton of

At Baha'i Congress

Carmelites Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Thiele, Miss Theresa Britten and Mrs. Laura Smithson; and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Dahl, of Pebble Beach, with their sons, Keith, Gregory, Arthur and Roger, are members of the Baha'i Faith from this area who were in London last week for the Baha'i World Congress.

Among the 6,200 delegates from over 70 countries were Eskimos from the Arctic, Indians from North and South America, Pygmy tribesmen from the Congo, former "untouchables" from India, aborigines from Australia, Vietnamese, Filipinos, Chinese, Japanese and Europeans.

Welcome

New residents of Carmel are Dr. Earl Richert Olsen, whose base of operation will be Fort Ord, and attorney Dave Sandborg, who is connected with the District Attorney's office in Monterey. They will occupy the pleasant bachelor home of Harold F. Erickson, who is on assignment in Vietnam for Stanford Research Institute.

Come to the Fair

This Sunday from 3 to 5 p.m., a Grape Fair "Wine-Tasting" will be held in the courtyard of the Carmel Mission Basilica. Sponsored by the Catholic Literature Distribution Guild, the pleasant afternoon will include an art exhibit and the donated prize of a personal portrait by Carmel's well known artist, Agostino Velletri which will be framed by Tony Klepich.

Postal Supervisors Meet

A caravan ride along the Seventeen-Mile Drive is on the agenda of the California State Branch and Auxiliary of the National Association of Postal Supervisors convening today as guests of the Coast Counties Branch.

Assistant Postmaster William P. Woolsey and Superintendent of Mails Maurice L. Stoney of the Carmel Post Office are members of the association, and their wives are members-at-large of the State auxiliary.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

A Bible Lesson on the subject of "Mortals and Immortals" will be read this Sunday at First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Golden Text: "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality" (I Cor. 15:53).

Related readings from the Christian Science textbook include these lines: "Either here or hereafter, suffering or Science must destroy all illusions regarding life and mind, and regenerate material sense and self. The old man with his deeds must be put off" ("Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 296).

Honey Was Seventeen

When Honey Williams, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Russell Williams of Carmel Highlands, was planning her recent birthday festivities, it seemed a beautiful coincidence that the house of her grandmother, the late Mrs. Theodore M. Criley, was "between tenants" and unoccupied on 3 May.

Honey and a crew of willing workers shined, polished, and arranged masses of flowers in the big studio-living room. Mrs. Williams baked a turkey and a ham.

It was a happy occasion. Over 100 guests of all ages, from four-year-old cousins to many of her grandmother's friends, filled the house with gaiety, the younger people dancing, the older ones reminiscing about gatherings they had attended there in the '30s and '40s, and the wedding reception Mrs. Criley had given for Honey's older sister, Bee (Mrs. Ben Chaffey), in the spring of 1954.

Honey, who will graduate from Carmel High School next month, will leave in September for a year abroad and further studies at the Villa Mercede in Florence, Italy.

Spring Dance

Everyone is invited to the sixth annual spring dance sponsored by the Carmel Merchants Softball Team which will take place at the American Legion Hall on Saturday at 9 p.m. Marty Artellan and The Sunrisers will provide music for dancing.

Altar Society

Mrs. Jack Call and Mrs. Kenneth White were hostesses for the monthly meeting of the Altar Society of the Carmel Mission Basilica, held at the Villa Angelica on Thursday. New officers for 1963-64, installed by Mrs. Joseph McCloskey, are Mrs. Shelburn Robison, president; Mrs. John Frey, vice-president; Mrs. Francis J. Sparolini, secretary; Mrs. Alvin Ferrera, treasurer.

The annual luncheon of the Altar Society is planned for Tuesday, 13 June, at 12:30 p.m. at Dominici's Restaurant, Carmel River Inn. Members, and others wishing to attend, may make reservations through Mrs. Sparolini, MA 4-4144.

He Looks Just Like

His mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Rowedder of Carmel. His name is Anthony Mark and his birthday was 25 April at the Community Hospital.

A present to young Master Harney of Carmel was baby sister Laurie Ann, born on his birthday, 3 May. The parents are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harney. So far, Mrs. Harney says, baby Laurie looks like everyone in the family.

Jon Sterling has been the new house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Smith of Carmel since 24 April.

Looking like no one but himself, according to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter M. Lyon of Mission Field Road, is very young Robert Gregory, as of May Day.

Mayor to Majorca

Mayor Eben Whittlesey of Carmel, Mrs. Whittlesey, and daughter Debbie embark on 27 May for an official visit to Spain, at the invitation of the Spanish government. The occasion for the trip is a visit to our sister city Petra, birthplace of Fr. Junipero Serra, to celebrate the 250th anniversary of his birth.

The Whittleseys will fly from San Francisco to New York, then via Spanish Air Line overnight to Madrid. From there they will visit Majorca and Petra. With them will be a gift from Mrs. Nelson Miles Leoni of Carmel Valley—a moonlight painting of the Carmel Mission done many years ago, before the restoration. Of particular interest is the fact that Mrs. Leoni is the daughter of Frank Powers, one of the founders of Carmel. Brigadier General Frank Dorn of our city had also contributed many pictures of the California missions to Petra.

An excitement for Debbie Whittlesey is that the Spanish government has asked for her measurement to prepare a costume for her to be worn in conjunction with the Petra fete.

The family will return to New York for a brief visit with the Mayor's brother, Granville, a lawyer.

Welcome home will be approximately 10 June. Bon voyage!

Fancy Footwork at Wharf

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 23, 24, 25 May, are the dates set for the League Footlight Follies at the Wharf Theatre and Opera House in Monterey. A musical and comedy revue for the benefit of the Junior Science Musuem which the league is building, the production is staged by Ted Hook of New York, associated with the Jerome Cargill Producing Corporation.

Among the members of the cast, who describe their director as a "delight," are Betty Fowlston, Ruth McElroy, Sam and Edie Karas, Florence Dormody and Mrs. F. Robert Smith.

The sets have been designed by Mel Hoover, who did such an excellent job on the Naval Postgraduate School's "Kismet."

Chairman for the event, which anticipates a "sell-out" audience, is Mrs. John A. Clancy of Carmel; co-chairman, Mrs. Ethel MacDougal of Salinas.

Fellowship Tea

The Women's Association of the Carmel Presbyterian Church will give a Fellowship Tea at 2 p.m. on Thursday, 23 May, to honor all women who joined the church during the past year. Guests of members are welcome.

may do so. So here is your chance to stop just threatening to get a patent on some of your fresh ideas. Read this book and get at it!

Another recipe book with a bang is Helen Corbitt's Potluck. It is a small book containing a collection of gourmet recipes. The author is director of restaurants for Neiman-Marcus and should know whereof she writes.

Almost every day the postman hauls books out of the curb-side mail box near the library, and almost every day our custodian finds letters in the bookdrop. I think we get the books soon enough, but our bookdrop is emptied only once a day and this may hold up the mail delivery by a day or so. It could.

Where There's Life . . .

By Andre Hope

This past week in connection with my habit of celebrating any and all holidays, I sort of combined Mother's Day and Be Kind to Animals by going to the San Francisco Zoo to take a look at the spring crop. I always feel so silly traveling all the way there to gawk at the squirrels and 'coons and seals and deer, when goodness knows I am surrounded at home. As a matter of fact, I even used to ride the carousel, but no more. Since the brass ring has vanished and the horses on the outside don't go up and down but merely stand there, the thrill, somehow, has gone. I am pleased to report that the animals, particularly the lady types, are becoming quite Americanized. The mother lion sunned herself in solitary splendor while her pride of cubs climbed all over their dad. The same scheme of things applied to the orangutangs. Her majesty lolled elegantly, banana in hand, in her tire hammock while Junior used his father's back for a trampoline. I loved the expression on dad's face. He lay there, chin resting on his fist, gazing dourly out at all the human males with their offspring on their backs, as if to say, "There may be a few thousand years' difference between us, but that's as far as you got, brother?"

Being something in the gourmet way, we always try to arrive at the zoo around feeding time. The variety and intricacy of the different diets is amazing. We watched one keeper feeding the monkeys from great shining pans which included lettuce, carrots, grapes, oranges (at those prices!), bananas and, in some cases, nuts. Some small boys were hoisting popcorn into one cage clearly marked "Do Not Feed!" When the keeper pointed out the sign to them, one of the little gents peered into monkey's supper dish with great disgust. "Well, you're doin' it, and what are you givin' him (shudder) — vegetables!" Dennis the Menace is everywhere.

Warning: if your offspring are devotees of horror films, do not destroy their little illusions by showing them the gorillas. They are gentle vegetarians, who, the day we were there, were disporting themselves in their moat, coming out occasionally to give their trainer an affectionate, albeit damp, hug or pat . . . Most romantic sight: the ten-year-old black leopard watching affectionately as his ten-month-old, Lolita-like girl friend chomped away on his king-sized bone . . . Most extraordinary sight: a raunchy little peahen unconcernedly arranging her dowdy attire while a magnificent male turned slowly before her, proudly displaying a fully spread tail, each feather perfect, which the attendant told us was at least ten feet in span . . . Most incongruous: the dainty spring flowers, primroses, etc., planted along the moats in front of the grottos housing the great bears and big cats . . . Most beautiful: sunset (and it was one of those pink, gold ones) mirrored in the pool where the flamingos slept, one-legged, looking like giant tropical flowers of orange, pink and red, swaying gracefully on their long stems.

I wonder why, with all of our beautiful, natural surroundings, there couldn't be some place on the Peninsula for a small, select zoo instead of another motel or shopping center. It would be so nice for the children—namely me.

"WHO WOULD BE CRAZY ENOUGH TO BUY MY HOUSE?" The owner asked us that, so we went out to Carmel Valley to have a look. We could clearly see that the indoor-outdoor adobe house isn't for just anybody, what with the patios and the gnarled old oak trees practically in your lap when you sit before the fireplace in the living room. And who would want a swimming pool on top of a mountain with nothing to look at but the Santa Lucias and the blue, blue sky? Besides, there's turquoise tile on the dining room floor, and the kitchen doesn't even have a built-in oven. And who would want a house with only only bedroom, even if that bedroom does have a fireplace, two sets of closets and its own patio? There IS carpeting in the living room and bedroom, but no drapes, and you'd probably want to shut out that splendid, sweeping view once in a while even if no one for acres around CAN see in. Besides, it's pretty secluded on three acres; while you could sell off one or two buiding sites, it's still two miles above Carmel Valley Village and in the sun 95% of the year. If no one WILL buy this house, we suppose the owner might lease it for $300 a month during the summer, with an option to buy at the end of that time if you wanted to do so . . . Frankly, we hope nobody does want to buy it until we can save up $49,500 and buy it ourselves! We love it! Further details and an appointment to see will therefore be reluctantly provided by the undersigned.

Art For All

Sears, Roebuck and Company will unveil the Vincent Price collection of fine art Thursday, 23 May, in its Salinas store.

The collection, which includes original works from old masters and from outstanding contemporary artists, was assembled by Vincent Price, noted art authority and actor, for exhibit and sales in Sears stores in selected cities across the nation.

All types of art, "from 16th and 17th century masters right up through the day after tomorrow," are included in the collection, Price has stated. There are oils, watercolors, etchings, lithographs, sketches and pastels by old masters and by unknowns who could be "masters of the future," according to the actor-collector.

Dim Prospects

of the Commission with the whole proposition.

Josselyn's report said, "The basis for granting the original use permit for the Presbyterian Church was based on the agreement that the church would never seek to enlarge; large public structures in residential areas affect the area adversely and have a far-reaching effect on the entire city; large areas of non-taxable land pose a problem for the taxpayers within a city whose population has remained almost static; the present church facilities adequately fulfill the needs of the residents of Carmel as well as many non-residents."

Smith, while he was willing to concede a Sunday school facility (which would double the size of the present structure) was adamant about allowing any more than 8,000 square feet of parking, a matter which is not presently in contest, but which is part of the acknowledged multi-phased program of the church.

"While we may permit a small increase," he said, "we should keep a sharp eye to discourage a second enlargement which could turn the premises into something unattractive."

Mrs. Josselyn, who has sat on the Commission since its inception, and who frequently serves as its unbiased conscience, said later: "I can't think of a single use permit that hasn't eventually expanded or changed. When the church first applied for permission to build at the present site, we urged them to go some place where they could expand. Over and over, they assured us that they wouldn't have to."

But nine years later, the church is seeking a 4,172 square foot Sunday school, a 12,000 square foot parking lot, and admittedly is contemplating the necessity to increase the capacity of their 250-worshipper chapel by as much as 90 more persons; all of which, if realized, would triple the size of the institution.

A greatly-enlarged membership in the attractive and popular institution has compelled church authorities to seek permission for the expansion, and the sincere belief of adherents to the cause is that no better purpose could be served.

But Planning Commissioners, long-used to facing up to unpopular realities, appeared reluctant yesterday to give way.

Chairman Fred Keeble succinctly stated the Commission's problem: "How large can these institutions get without affecting Carmel?"

Responded Commission J. B. Martin, "It was presented to us originally as a small congregation, and so we didn't oppose it. Now, it's a question of keeping our word. It's hard for the neighborhood to live around the traffic this use generates, and the sooner we let them know we won't tolerate any further expansion, the sooner they will stop buying property in expectation that they can grow. It's not what the church wants, it's what the neighborhood will endure."

Looking balefully at more property removed from the tax roll, at vast expanses of blacktop parking lots in a residential district, and at an institutional use which proposes to take over almost one-half of a residential block — yet, confronted with the earnest religious needs of a pious people — the Planning Commission commiserated with committeemen Josselyn and Smith and prepared to receive their formal report of findings and recommendations at next Wednesday's regular meeting.

BEST BET: The Commission will deny the permit, the church will appeal the decision, and the City Council, newly-constituted, will overrule the Commission.

Majesty of Law

give uncomfortable testimony.

The simple fact of the matter is that Chamberlin was unsatisfactory to Huber, who, as president, is charged with the responsibility of running a college.

But the sometimes over-zealous apparatus of law, in seeking equity, produces injustice. And the moment that Chamberlin requested a hearing into Huber's charges against him, the whole mortifying process was set in train.

When the testimony and cross-examination was concluded Tuesday night, the Board commenced an unprecedented public debate before some 150 absorbed members of the audience, at the conclusion of which they rejected Stewart's plea for a continuation, to permit completion of a broad investigation of college matters by the California School Boards Association. They also demurred to his proposal that they cast a secret ballot. Publicly, and with some disquiet, they voted three (Lockhart, O'Dea, Winters) to two (Raggett, Hughes) to sustain Huber's refusal to renew Chamberlin's contract.

Chamberlin may appeal the decision to the superior court, but Stewart, somewhat trenchantly, defined such a recourse as "a noble but fruitless gesture."

Trustee Stafford Hughes said, "This is a very foolish law." Today, there are few who would gainsay him. Perhaps, not even Philip Chamberlin.

Wealthy Widow

on the Plan — even though the money were not spent — would constitute unethical, if not illegal, hanky-panky that would not go uncriticized.

Everybody is smiling happily at the moment, and murmuring agreeably to one another. But the wealthy widow, if she has any sense at all, is not going to be deceived by the eager generosity being expressed all around her. She has not yet reached the point where executors are needed to handle her estate.

WHAT'S DOING

D. D. Muir, your Telephone Manager in Carmel

The telephone technician at the right is testing a tiny part of a newly developed underseas phone cable. These cables are designed to function perfectly at the bottom of the sea for twenty years or more so the tests must be rigorous. One such test determines if the cable can withstand the tremendous pressures found on the ocean floor. It uses helium and is so exacting that it's capable of detecting a leak so tiny that the escaping gas would take 26 years to fill a thimble. It's care like this that helps us to bring you the best possible telephone service.

Interesting fact: At the beginning of 1962, all of Russia had only 455,000 more telephones than New York City.
